4. [redacted] Accompanied Messrs. Houston, Broe, Osborn, [redacted] to a meeting with the Special Subcommittee on Intelligence of House Armed Services Committee. The Subcommittee was interested in getting testimony about Agency action taken on letters received from James McCord and to get testimony from [redacted] about the preparation of General Walters' various memoranda which were previously submitted to the Subcommittee. See Memorandum for the Record.

5. [redacted] During this morning's hearing I was called by Jim Woolsey, Senate Armed Services Committee staff. He said they were preparing to send to the prosecuting attorney (Silbert) and Senator Ervin's Watergate Committee copies of the McCord letters. Woolsey wanted to know if these letters were considered classified. If so, he wished to include an appropriate warning in his transmittal letters. After checking with Mr. Osborn, D/S, I told Woolsey the letters were not classified. I added, however, that as I thought he knew, the documents were sensitive to the extent that they might be material evidence in future legal proceedings. Woolsey said he was aware of this aspect of the letters.
